

colombia palmichal

blackberry | milk chocolate | dulce de leche | roast palmichal is a farm located in the quindio region of colombia, near the town of la coqueta. palmichal is owned and operated by atilano giraldo, who works the farm year round. the farm has two distinct rainy seasons, allowing for two crops per year. we were a bit surprised to find that this particular lot is 100% castillo, given the clean, fruit forward nature of the samples. that citrus quality turned to a lip-smacking blackberry with the roast we injected.

this coffee comes to us via interamerican, and this is the first year they've purchased coffee from palmichal, offering a 10 cent per pound premium. it seems the relationship had been developed, and we'd imagine that premium will only go up in future years.

this particular coffee is grown at 1560 meters, and consists of 100% castillo variety. it is fully washed at a centralized wet mill.
