

costa rica san calletano

red honey

cherry jolly rancher | honeydew | beaujolais | hibiscus

a new relationship for us! diego abarca is an enterprising young producer in the famous tarrazu region of costa rica. in addition to owning the alto san juan micromill, diego also runs san calletano, the farm where this coffee is produced. diego is a fourth generation farmer, and took a plot of land given to him by his father and turned it into his own successful operation.

from diego: "my family is dedicated to the cultivation of coffee, currently i am the fourth generation in coffee production family. all my life i have been linked to coffee production and cultivation. since i was a child, i remember working during my school vacations collecting coffee... i believe that what makes my coffee different from others is the passion with which i produce. this has moved me from the beginning to be in constant innovation in processes and varieties." this coffee comes from the tarrazu region, and is grown between at 1600 meters. it consists of 100% catuai variety, and underwent red honey processing. the coffee is depulped, then dried on patio while being turned several times per day.

coffee is multiple generations at one line coffee, we specialize in sourcing and roasting seasonal, single farm coffees in an ethical and sustainable way. we believe in giving credit to a farmer, and work hard to match their passion when we roast. visit us at onelinecoffee.com

